Actions in red.

Agenda

1. Website. Finishing. Website responsibilities. Unified Data Base. Problem with people that have not mail. Using official mail. Firma en ECI.
2. Proposal for concrete funding mechanisms. Juan Camilo: * digital campaigns; * visits to cities, including the donor's city; * an intensive outreach campaign with a national government (such as the donor's country of residence); * improvements to a technical aspect of our website or information system; * or organizing an in-person meeting for the World Constituent Assembly, etc.
3. Mass campaign. Estimated budget. Specifications for the Russian team. Landing page.
4. Treasurer. TAX USA (Florida) offers accounting services for the donations we receive.
5. World Observatory (a proposal I posted in the discussion group). Could be interesting to have it in the Web page.
6. Evaluation of PWP18 and the commissions (12 active); 4 new WLAs (AI, How to submit WLAs, Rules for WCA, Agreement PWP-WSA).
7. World Constituent Assembly.

The agenda was not followed. The meeting focused on Chema's concerns; he expressed deep discouragement regarding the lack of progress, organizational confusion, the absence of an effective Permanent Secretariat, the unclear website, and missed opportunities such as the BRICS bloc and the organization to review the article 109.

Glen and Leopoldo argued that the work accomplished since December 2025 had been significant, highlighting the launch of the new website, the activity of various commissions and committees, and the existence of a plan to engage nations and broaden the support base. Glen emphasized that the Earth Constitution is already a solid document requiring no revisions; the main challenge, he noted, is engaging nations in the Constituent Assembly process to achieve genuine legal change. Roger suggested that Chema might step aside until these changes are implemented and then return; Chema replied that he would retire from the effort but would not speak negatively about the work done.

There was a debate regarding the need for a full-time Permanent Secretariat, the potential replacement of Hanumesh, and the advisability of offering roles to individuals like Chandra or Eugenia Almand—with conflicting views on their suitability. Discussions also covered the importance of registering the movement in various countries, current limitations in contacting governments and international forums, and potential financial support, including a Russian contact who might fund an outreach campaign. Finally, the group acknowledged the tension between Chema's perception of stagnation and Glen, Roger and Leopoldo's more optimistic view of the project's progress.

Chema indicated that he would likely reduce his level of involvement in the Earth Constitution project, effectively putting his participation on hold.

The discussion focused on priorities for engaging with countries; Russia was identified as the primary target nation, followed by China, Iran, and India. In fact, a list of 15 nations has already been approved for initiating contact. Glen reported a potential breakthrough with Russia through a contact who could facilitate a massive outreach campaign—funded by Russian millionaires—valued at $30,000–$50,000, which could open doors to further funding and connections. Glen will continue communicating and negotiating with the Russian organizations (Michail Krasinovich and Michail Krusevov) regarding a potential outreach campaign funded by Russian billionaires.

Glen reported a positive development involving Thomas Stafford of the World Intellectual Wisdom Forum, who is acting as a mediator to resolve issues with Sam Pitroda and Eugenia Almand, including the possibility of Sam stepping down as the self-proclaimed president of the India website. Glen will continue to pursue these efforts.
