GLOBAL CITIZENSHIP RESOLUTION FOR FREE WORLD INTERNET.

Sponsored by David Quispe

Whereas, early everywhere on Earth, "citizenship is restricted to nation-states, and human rights of people not within a particular nation-state are routinely violated.

Whereas, the "war-system" by which nation-states operate allows each state to designate some opposing group or other nation as an "enemy" to be collectively killed in war, and national rivalries often attempt to limit the interconnectivity of citizens with one another worldwide.

Whereas, the world is becoming digitized with the advent of cell phones, AI, and other digital forms of communication which are today fundamental to human persons communicating with one another across the globe and working to develop forms of peaceful and harmonious global governing.

Whereas, the internet is now controlled by giant profit-making organizations that restrict usage for those who cannot afford to pay.

Whereas, the Constitution for the Federation of Earth recognizes every person born on Earth as a citizen under the Constitution and subject to the same rights and obligations as every other citizen, including the rights to mutual communication, debate, and discussion,

We delegates of this 16th session of the Provisional World Parliament reaffirm this dimension of the Earth Constitution in relation to the digital revolution with the following declaration:

This Parliament affirms the fundamental right to be recognized as a human being within the world's current circumstances of technological globality, the formation of a world political governance. and the fundamental Universal rights in the current circumstance of Identification, Digital Literacy, and use of social networks for the formation of democratic actions to share information, coordination of actions, control and supervision of the holders of power, which means access to the free World Internet in its basic elements for the exercise of global citizenship.
